Registration Deadline: December 12, 2023

Registration: Online through crisisnegotiation.net

Course Description: This course is designed to prepare team members, and specifically team leaders, for the challenging task of developing teams and more importantly, working as a team during crisis events. Students will learn the benefits of a team structure; one that is based on tactics and strategy. When a team is created with a clear definition of roles and norms - strategic goals of the team are more easily met. Structure also serves as a foundation for highly motivated teams to communicate well with one another. Students will also learn team motivational guidelines including leadership, advocacy, standards, and accountability for crisis negotiation teams. Lastly, students will learn the importance of trust and rapport within a team as the critical leverage for building genuine rapport and trust with those in crisis.
